Honey History

The bee has been living on earth for at least 15 million years. It is one of the oldest species on earth which still exists nowadays. One of the most important products that humans benefit from the bee is honey.

The use of honey and its importance is revealed from the ancient years.

Hippocrates, the father of medicine (462-352 BC), not only suggested the use of honey to his patients but also to the healthy people because he believed that it had many beneficial and therapeutic qualities for the human body.

The ancient Greeks believed that the Olympian gods used to eat honey (Nectar of Gods). All ancient great philosophers and scientists such as, Homer, Hippocrates, Dioskorides - the father of pharmacology, Pythagoras and Aristotle referred to honey as a high quality nutritional food with great values, which lead to a perfectly healthy organism.

Natural honey consists of more than 180 nutritional substances, i.e. organic acids, minerals (potassium, calcium, magnesium, iron, copper, phosphorus, sodium, zinc, boron), enzymes and vitamins such as A, B1, B2, B3, B6, B12, C, D and E.

Moreover, it has antioxidants and anti-inflammatory qualities which make it extremely precious nourishment.
